Attalie Anne Creates Theme Song for Todd Bridges' New Podcast DANG!

PHOENIX, AZ - DECEMBER 2024 - Actor Todd Bridges and his wife, creative lifestyle guru Bettijo Bridges, will debut their new podcast DANG! on December 3 on major streaming platforms including Spotify, Apple, Google Play, and YouTube. The podcast will explore the messy side of family life featuring candid discussions about blended families (Todd has two children, Bettijo has four); Todd's 31 year plus sobriety; heartfelt stories and plenty of laughs.

The dynamic duo brings a wealth of life experience: Todd, a relatable modern dad who gained fame (and survived it!) as a young actor on the hit TV series Diff'rent Strokes, and Bettijo, a family lifestyle blogger at PagingSupermom.com, known for her practical creativity and family-focused content.

Making it a true family affair, the Bridges' 19-year-old daughter, Attalie Anne, an emerging artist, and singer/songwriter, composed the podcast's theme song, also called "DANG!." Additionally, Attalie lends her talent behind the scenes as a co-producer of the podcast. The DANG! theme song will also be available December 3 on music streaming services.

"We wanted to create something that was authentic, relatable and entertaining," explains Todd. "The podcast is about the moments that may you say 'DANG!', whether good or bad."

The couple also started their own foundation to help addicts, The Society for Ethical Addiction Treatment (SEAT). The purpose behind it is to change the system around addiction with science-based methods in mind. Addressing issues regarding treatment accessibility, aftercare, and results transparency, SEAT looks to bridge the gap between addiction science and addiction treatment. With this concept in mind, the Foundation will share the scientific information they find, collaborate with industry leaders, and shine a spotlight on a key issue facing our society today.

Todd is one of the voice actors in Comedy Central's new TV series Everybody Still Hates Chris.
